SAN ANTONIO.

Funeral services for Harold F. Joske, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Joske, who was drowned Labor Day afternoon while bathing in the Guadalupe River, near New Braunfels, was held last Wednesday afternoon from the family home, 241 King William street. Burial was made in the Temple Beth-El Cemetery, Rabbi Barnestone of Houston officiating.

Mr. Joske was drowned about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when it is believed he became entangled in the brushwood. His body was not recovered until two hours' search. He was a member of many local organizations and one of the most promising young business men of this city. His sudden death came as a thunderbolt from a clear sky, and his numerous friends refused to believe the news for a great while. The heartfelt sympathy of the Jewish community goes out to the grief stricken parents.

Misses Rosalind Scharlack and Tillie Brown have returned home after a month's visit to California points. They report some time.

Hyman Ross, aged fifty years, dry goods merchant at 744 West Commerce street, died at 12:30 Thursday afternoon at a local hospital. Mr. Ross was a native of Poland, but had been a resident of San Antonio for the past twenty years. He was a member of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, and the Agudas Achim and Rodef Shalom Synagogues. Surviving besides one brother, Jacob Rozinsky of New York City, is a nephew, Morris Levinowsky of this city. Interment was in the Orthodox Cemetery.

Millions of dollars loss of merchandise and property and hundreds of lives were lost in San Antonio, as a result of a most terrible electrical storm and cloudburst of last Friday night. Beginning early Friday night, spectacular lightning and crashing thunder began to descend on the city, and by midnight, a cloudburst in the north of the city. This caused every stream and the San Antonio river to overflow their banks, with the result that by Saturday morning, destruction and havoc was seen on all sides. The down town section suffered the heaviest financially, as every store on Houston and Commerce streets was flooded with water. Hundreds of lives were swept on the swift current, while hundreds upon hundreds more saved themselves by clinging to tree tops, posts and other means of relief available. The city as plunged into darkness, while the greatest part of the town was without water, light, phone service, and gas for two days. With the dawn of Monday things began to take definite shape, and it is expected that rebuilding will soon start. So far, there are two Jewish people in the hospital, Miss Ethel Reich and her mother, Mrs. H. Reich, 2415 South Flores. Both are resting nicely.
